Gabe doesn't think he's much of an angel. In fact, the wings tattooed on his back embarrass the heck out of him. Ben thinks differently, though. When he meets Gabe he thinks he's found the angel he's been looking for, the man who will be the kind of lover he's been searching all his life for.

They're good together right from the start, Ben commanding, Gabe willing, the heat they generate enough to burn them to the ground. But can Gabe accept the things that Ben wants him to do, the things he's never even dreamed of wanting?

Gabe may be in college, but Ben is definitely more of a teacher than most of his professors. What he learns about sensuality and giving, though, he gives back in love.

Fallen Angel by Sean Michael

By Elisa

Ben and Gabe are two grad students, living one near the other but they have never met. Ben studies Computer Science and Gabe Art. Ben is friendly and a partyman, Gabe is shy and all work. But when Ben sees Gabe, he immediately thinks to an angel, and he doesn't know that, for real, Gabe has tattooed two wings on his back (his real name is Gabriel). When Ben knows about the wings, it's like a sign: Gabe has to be his and he will not stop in front of nothing to have this man.

Gabe is fragile and very artist like. He prefers to let it speak his art and not him or his body. But Ben is overwhelming, both physical then mental, and he coaxes Gabe in this relationship. Sometimes I was wondering if what Gabe accepts to do is really his willing or is only what Ben wants... but at the end, love is also this, try to build something together, accepting all of your lover.

A short but enjoyable reading, about young love, when all is possible and life is still simple.

Fallen Angel

Typical Sean Michael...there really isn't much of a story line here. It just rambles away with constant sex. You don't get to know the characters or even learn of a plot or struggles for them to overcome. Great sexual encounters but that's it...A disappointment.
