THE SNOW LEOPARD BY MADAME DE MORVILLE PDF

Beyond the limits of man's vision, beyond the physical summits of the highest mountains, there exist other ranges of mountains extending far up into the night sky. When all the known world has succumbed to the darkness of sleep, the dreaming man can perceive this invisible mountainscape upon whose glistening slopes stars sparkle in the powdery new-fallen snow. Its jagged contours seem to him supported by the physical peaks of the Himalayas, Alps and Pyrenees. Were this dreamer possessed of the eagle's sharp-focused eye, he would see the polished silhouettes of goddesses, the outline of palaces, of castles in the sky. He might glimpse from the foot-hills the shine and purpose of the black stiletto boot, the serpentine whip held uncoiled in the gloved hand, sensitive to the dreamer's slow ascent. Enter the realm of the snow leopard ... of the smooth-booted and predatory Goddess.

The Bavarian Boot

By H.B. Loomis

De Morville writes from a literary mountain top, casting a cold gaze on mortal man from the lofty steel throne that occupies the ice palace of her mind. An intellectually engaging account awaits the reader, one that defies the commonplace and extols the virtue of a life lived in the kingdom of wild imaginings, a cruel realm where suffering is a salve and pain a pleasurable penance. Great cover art, and overall, a highly original story inspired, we think, by the Gothic grandeur King Ludwig left behind as his tribute to Venus in the Bavarian Alps.
